

Jubilee Line Extension

INNOVATION

The Jubilee Line Extension's 16km of track is serviced by 11 brand new state-of-the-art stations joining with the existing Jubilee Line at Westminster Station and extending south of the river Thames then eastwards and north again to terminate at Stratford station.

The extension links important leisure facilities and business locations such as the Millennium Dome at Greenwich North and the cathedral like Canary Wharf Station.

Each new station was designed by a different architect and has its own individual aesthetic.

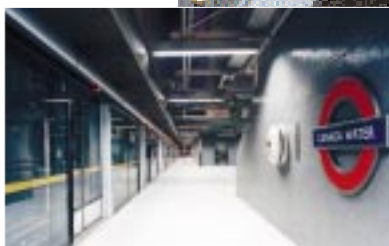

The lighting was specially designed for the extension and is one of the components that helps visually link the stations in a functional manor.

Designed in conjunction with the architects, consultants and London Underground themselves the products shown befit the scale of this project and are the true essence of quality engineering.
